In a word: Beautiful. Visually, the graphics on display here are smooth, stylized, and *fantastic* in every sense of the word. It seems like whoever was in charge of the art direction paid attention to what works visually on current gen VR headsets, and used every VR-graphics-enhancing technique in the book. I'd compare the visuals to how Valve's "The Lab" looks in how crisp and clear everything is. The opening of the game (being carried by a giant) was pretty cool, but I feel like the real 'wow' factor kicked in around the 3rd or 4th stage (didn't take long to get there -the first few puzzles are pretty simple warmups), where the impressive scale of the city-sized temple environments *really* starts to kick it up a couple notches. I picked this game up for the graphics (I'd heard this game compared to 'Journey' for the PS4 visually and environments-wise, and after playing it for myself, I'd solidly agree), but the puzzles I've encountered so far have been surprisingly engaging, regularly introducing new mechanics, and becoming increasingly challenging. The music also deserves a mention - what they've got going on here goes *great* with the breathtaking vistas, enhancing the atmosphere in a cohesive way that I seems to be *really* rare in this early stage of VR gaming. *Highly* recommended.. Rangi is a large scale puzzle game with great music and sound fx. The puzzles aren't so difficult but they are very big which is what you want in VR.. This is really a fantastic title! I have 1.4 hours in so far and have to say I am totally getting my 10 bucks worth! it has a very stylized, simplistic, charming art style that really just lets you enjoy the game without having to pick apart how detailed the art is. I just love the music so much! the environments are big so the puzzles can span many different rooms and though they aren't the most difficult in the world they can prove a little challenging and fun to solve. the platforming part is really fun! you just teleport from place to place in this game but the way the devs incorporated it, the locomotion is basically part of the whole puzzle so that makes it pretty great and also makes for some fun and anxiety waiting for the next spot to be open or free before you get smashed! So yes this really kind of a surprise and should definitely be played if you feel like some relaxing medium challenge puzzle solving, fun VR world to play through and some groovy music. If you are looking for hard puzzles, this won't be your thing. Try Obduction or Phantasma if you really want to cramp your brain muscle.. Beautiful art, wonderful music and logical puzzles that are not frustrating.. Rangi is a large scale puzzle game with great music and sound fx. The puzzles aren't so difficult but they are very big which is what you want in VR.
